

Daydreamer "Camus"

"Like the band name suggests, it's a dreamy mix of melodic post rock ambiance, and serves as a sort of soundtrack to the road movie that Albert Camus lived... and died on.."

Wormwood "My Two Minds Become Air"

"Wormwood is the electro-acoustic duo of Christina Willatt and Andrew Wenaus, and they are based in London, Ontario."

Enofa "Nerra Ninna Noak"

"Enofa has returned to our fold with a second of his pastorally infused, and most English sounding soundwalks of sorts. The crunch of the wet leaves underfoot, the bird song in the air, the folk cadences of a guitar in the distance, the overall melodic delicate electronic nuances...all of this languid, melancholic ambiance that we are accustomed to from him, are here to enjoy again."

Mikael Lind "Unsettled Beings"

"Beautiful piano-centric ambiance from this Swedish musician living now in Iceland"

Monochromie "Colors In The Dark"

"This is ambient melancholy at it's loveliest...upon hearing them these wonderfully evocative and plaintive melodies will remain with you throughout the day. Pastoral, emotive and nostalgically treated instrumentation and electronics, that leave a whole lot to the imagination...as all the most beautiful music does. Romantic...soothing...hopeful..."

Hoshiko Yamane & Mikael Lind "Spaces in Between"

"Musically, they both have a knack for creating mesmerizing ambient music with classical influences. With violin, viola and piano being at the forefront, and synths and sound design wrapping their themes up as a larger musical environment, they have created something extremely special here!"
